IN PURSUIT OF LEGISLATIVE ADJOURNMENT

Each year as the General Assembly prepares to adjourn its regular session, questions of a historical and statistical nature are raised. Answers to some frequently asked questions are below. Appendix A lists adjournment dates of regular sessions since 1971.

Which Illinois Constitution required the General Assembly to adjourn by a specific date?

None of the four Illinois Constitutions set a fixed legislative adjournment date. However, the 1870 Constitution established a fiscal biennium starting on July 1, and made that the earliest effective date for bills passed by a simple majority. In practice, this established June 30 as the latest date for adjourning a regular session.

The 1970 Constitution originally provided that any bill passed after June 30 needed a three-fifths majority in each house to take effect before July 1 of the next year. A 1994 constitutional amendment changed the June 30 cutoff to May 31, encouraging earlier adjournment.

Why did the delegates to the 1970 constitutional convention expect the legislature to adjourn on a particular date?

The chairman of the Legislative Committee of the constitutional convention explained how this would be accomplished as follows:

We also have required and continue the requirement of a cut-off date. We enforce a cut-off date of July 1 by providing that only by a majority vote an act can become law if enacted before July 1, and it can have another effective date if enacted before July 1; but if enacted after July 1, it cannot have an effective date except the effective date of the next year unless there is an extraordinary majority of three-fifths. So this was the technique of enforcing the effective date of July 1.<sup>1</sup>

He concluded his discussion of the effective-date provision by saying: "I hope that that explanation is not too misunderstandable . . ."

What is the earliest that the General Assembly has adjourned its regular session in the last 100 years?

Until annual sessions began in 1968, the General Assembly had adjourned on or near June 30 each year since 1913. It adjourned on June 1 in 1911, June 4 in 1909, May 23 in 1908 (an unusual even-year regular session), May 6 in 1905, May 7 in 1903, May 4 in 1901, April 14 in 1899, June 4 in 1897, and June 14 in 1895.

The first regular session of an even-numbered year in modern times (in 1968) adjourned March 4—but no budget had to be enacted that year, since a biennial budget had been approved the year before. There was also a special session in 1968 from July 15 to 25. The 1970 regular session adjourned May 29, but legislators came back into special session from June 15 to June 29. Since 1970, the earliest the General Assembly has adjourned was April 15 in 2000. Appendix A shows all these adjournment dates.

What happens if the House and the Senate cannot agree on the time of adjournment?

When either the House or the Senate certifies to the Governor that the two houses are in disagreement over adjournment, the Governor can “prorogue” the session—issue a proclamation stating the disagreement and proclaiming the session adjourned to a date not later than the first day of the next annual session. This has happened four times since 1945: Governor Dwight H. Green adjourned the second special session of the 63rd General Assembly on August 1, 1946; Governor Adlai E. Stevenson adjourned the 66th General Assembly on June 30, 1949; Governor Otto Kerner adjourned the 73rd General Assembly on June 28, 1963; and Governor Richard B. Ogilvie adjourned the 76th General Assembly on November 17, 1970.

How does payment of per diem relate to timely adjournment?

The Constitution of 1848 set legislative compensation at $2 per day for the first 42 session days, falling to $1 per day thereafter. In 1995 the General Assembly enacted a similar provision, saying that legislators’ per diems for lodging and meals would not be paid for regular session days after the last day of May each year, except during special or veto sessions.<sup>2</sup>
