The Secretary of State and I would like to announce that...being deeply interested in ethnic heritage of the...our great country, I thought it would be proper to invite you all and to let you know that on Monroe Street side of the Capital, the exhibit..."The Move to Freedom" exhibit is there. This exhibit is a traveling display...housing a forty-eight foot highway wedge van designed to recreate the images and impressions arrived by immigrants shared...of Ellis Island and the Statue of Liberty. My grandparents and my forefathers came and were part of that, as many of us; and the creative display is of history and patriotism, including a multimedial production, historical photography and film footage of the 1976 bicentennial celebration in a three and a half minute audio-visual presentation. It concludes with the direct request for visitors to the exhibit to support the Statue of Liberty restoration project financially, and the exhibit will be there from 9:45 a.m. today to 6:00 p.m. And I think it's appropriate that we all should go there and advise as many of our staff and everybody else to go there because this is a symbol of patriotism in this country. This is the first symbol that my forefathers or most forefathers saw when they came to this country was the Statue of Liberty, and I ask you all to take time out today to look at this exhibit. Thank you, very much.
