Hello, I'm a Southeast Asian millennial voter who currently resides in the third district, which is represented by Marie Newman, a progressive Democrat backed by the DSA and Sunrise Movement.

I thought I'd try to contribute towards congressional redistricting before the final public hearings tomorrow by submitting three possible maps, all of which were drafted by political experts (not me). They should look as compact as possible and be (at least mostly) VRA-compliant. I've linked to the original social media posts and attached their proposals to this message.

Of course, there will more than likely be at least some backlash towards any of these maps if one of them were approved and enacted into law. The fact of the matter is, the Republican Party is guilty of gerrymandering to the extreme in the states they control, so as long as it's perfectly legal, it's only fair to, as the saying goes, fight fire with fire. Right now, maintaining control of the House of Representatives under the Democratic Party should be the main goal to help further President Biden's agenda.
